Forbes Unveils its 50 Over 50: Investment List

FORBES

NEW YORK – September 14, 2021 – Forbes today unveils its 50 Over 50: Investment list, which highlights the female investors and financial leaders who are leading high-growth businesses in the male-dominated spaces of Wall Street, venture capital, and impact investing.

Forbes' "50 Over 50" platform, in partnership with Mika Brzezinski's "Know Your Value," is dedicated to shining a light on diverse women over the age of 50 who have achieved significant success later in life, often by overcoming formidable odds or barriers. Due to an abundance of interest in the inaugural 50 Over 50 list, Forbes has continued to roll out additional sub lists to spotlight women who are achieving great success after 50. In addition to the 50 Over 50: Investment list, Forbes has published a sub-list focused on Vision, which highlights women making an impact on society through their work in art and science, and Impact, which celebrates women who are changing their communities and the world through social entrepreneurship, law, advocacy and education.

"The women on this list are changing the face of finance and creating new ways to move and make money," said Maggie McGrath, Editor, ForbesWomen. "Whether working on Wall Street, venture capital or as a fintech founder, they're united by a shared mission to make finance more inclusive and increase women's economic participation. They're paving the way for other women to be leaders and make a lasting impact in a traditionally male-dominated industry."
